A party of French exiles led by General Charles HALLEMAND set up a base near the present town of LIBERTY in 1818. Hallemand and his followers had been supporters of Napoleon Bonaparte. They fled after Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo and their apparent intention in settling in Texas was to establish a base for a Bonaparte revival. They called them home in the Trinity R. the

CAMP D'ASILE (a Field of Refuge)

and they were heavily armed. Napoleon's brother Joseph Bonaparte was living in N.Y.

1818

The French under Lallemand were planning a campaign to free Mexico from Spain, put Joseph Bonaparte (in New Jersey) on the throne of Mexico and then rescue Napoleon from St. Helena.

The Spanish learned of the plans and sent an expedition from Mexico to attack the CHAMP D'ASILE in the Trinity.

Rever. Although they were small, ill equipped and poorly organized, Hallen and his party had scattered by the time the Spanish got there.

The role of Jean Lafitte in these events is unclear. By some accounts he was a supporter of the exile, but Spanish documents name him as a secret agent. The Spanish burned the settlement and the log fortification. In 1936, the State of Texas put up a marker.
